John was an American who worked for a bank in New York. He was told to move to London and work there by his boss. He was happy because he was very interested in Europe. He flew to London soon.

He found a small but nice house with a garden near London and was very happy there. It took him ten minutes to get to work by car, but he usually walked to his office for exercise. He got to know some people who lived near his house and enjoyed talking with them in his garden. They often made jokes with each other.

One day when he was digging a big hole in his garden to plant a tree, one of his friends came to see him. He laughed and said, "Are you making a swimming pool, John?" "Oh, no," John laughed and answered, "I'm going back to New York!"

a. John felt  $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{① sad} \\ \text{② happy} \\ \text{③ nothing} \end{array} \right\}$  when his boss told him to move to London.
