On his first day in *¹Iran, John got lost while shopping in town. He asked an *²Iranian, “Could you tell me how to get to the Azadi Laleh Hotel? I’d like to go back there.” The man quickly pointed north and said, “It’s that way!” with a big smile.

However, John soon began to doubt his advice. “I’d better ask someone else,” he thought. He asked a second Iranian. The man pointed south and answered, “Go that way!” “Hmm,” John thought, “That doesn’t seem right, either.” He asked a third person. Then a fourth. They all replied kindly, but gave different answers. “Strange! Did they all lie to me?” Finally, he went back to his hotel by taxi.

Later, John found a book about Iranian culture. The book explained, “In Iran, when a foreign visitor asks a question, it is not polite to say, ‘I don’t know.’ So people give an answer quickly, even if they don’t really know.” He understood their way of thinking.

*¹Iran : イラン *²Iranian : イラン人
