When people tell us that we have done something wrong, they are giving us <sup>*1</sup>criticism. Most of us do not like hearing it. Also, many people do not like giving criticism because they do not want to hurt someone else's feelings. However, if we avoid criticism, we cannot make any progress. So, how can we give and get criticism well?

If you are giving criticism, try not to only talk about a person's bad points. When we do that, the listener often loses hope. Be sure to point out some good points, and give your advice kindly. This should be about an important thing that the other person can work on. Try to give the person something to aim for.

If you get criticism, though it is hard to feel good, try to have a <sup>*2</sup>positive attitude. Criticism can help us be more successful, so even if your actions are attacked or spoken of badly, stay cool. Write down what they say, and look at the ideas they gave you later. Remember, the goal is making progress! If you keep that in mind, accepting and giving criticism becomes much easier.
